A TRIP DOWN HOTH MEMORY LANE

As the Star Wars™ galaxy continues to expand, we still get that sense of awe whenever new locations, vehicles or starships appear in the movies or series. Yet some moments from the original trilogy remain so iconic, we could recite every frame and line – even if you woke us at 2 a.m.

One such unforgettable scene is the Empire's relentless assault on Echo Base. This super-detailed, desktop-friendly model of the AT-AT™ walker from The Empire Strikes Back™ is built with authentic precision to capture its towering menace during the Battle of Hoth.

Enjoy building!

TARGET ELIMINATED

Over 20 metres (65.5 ft.) tall, the AT-AT walker is the Empire's most fearsome ground assault vehicle. Air-dropped into battle, they're guided on the ground by terrain sensors in their feet and cockpit. This armoured giant's main purpose is to crush everything in its path. The head serves as a command centre where General Veers rains down fire from the heavy laser cannons. During the Battle of Hoth, Luke Skywalker orders his squadron to use tow cables to trip the walkers – an effective but costly tactic. Although most Rebels escape, Veers ultimately destroys the vital power generator, and the attack clears the way for Imperial forces to enter the base. Later, AT-AT walkers were used as transports on Endor, home of the Death Star II's shield.
